

There are numerous U.S college players who have gone to Europe and worked on all of their skills. There is less isolation of the ball in Europe and much more inside-out post play. College players who go to the better European leagues such as Spain, Greece, Italy and Russia should be looked at in their mid twenties by NBA teams, especially if they are leading in certain categories in those top leagues.